LESSONS FROM LYMAN

DR. J. GRANT LYMAN, of wildcat fame, whose only ambition was to rob and despoil his best friends, laments the decadent state of society that decrees for him eighteen months in an Arizona penitentiary. He arraigns the courts for immolating him on the altar of public clamor and snivels about his personal losses. In this category is included loss of caste, social standing, financial integrity, a disrupted home, a divorced wife and the death of a heart-broken mother. All these he weighs in the balance against the cruelty of the courts that pilloried him as an example for future unscrupulous scoundrels who thrive on the weaknesses of others. Dr. Lyman says he is the chief victim of his own perfidy and enumerates a long string of woes that have come to his share in society.

In doing this the champion bunco man fails to take into consideration the sufferings and poignant anxiety of others entailed by his rascally operations. He counts the agony of his own mother and the isolation of uxorious love, but he fails to depict the misery brought to thousands of innocent homes through the over-confidence of parents in investing their savings in the tedious schemes advanced by the crafty Los Angeles shark.

Multiply Lyman's alleged sufferings a thousand and you will reach a faint conception of the anguish endured by those who trusted his representations in following the real estate and speculative markets. A trail of suicides, broken hearts, homes wrecked and fathers driven to drunkenness to escape the consequences of yielding to this arch fiend's lurid promises of wealth on small investments. He craves mercy, but he never granted mercy to anyone caught in the coils he spread to ensnare the unwary. His only god was gold and the chief characteristic of his nature was avarice and greed for that which procured him sybaritic pleasures. Right here in Tonopah his victims are counted by the score. From worthy and estimable citizens many of them have been converted into derelicts that float down the stream of life hampering the progress of others and a handicap to their friends and relatives.

The sentence of eighteen months meted out to Lyman was a gift that he fails to appreciate and it is not likely that the lesson will be borne home to his innermost convictions that he is other than a much abused man. This is not his first experience with the stern hand of the law, and it is not going to be his last, despite his hypocritical professions that the only way to succeed is the right way.

Lyman paved the way with dishonest intentions and is reaping the harvest that usually is gathered by men of loose principles.

THE YELLOW PERIL

COMMERCIAL students are speculating upon the effect which the Panama canal will have upon the trade routes of the world. It is certain that the ancient glory of the Spanish main is to come again, without its buccaners. The west coast of South America is to be opened to European trade, together with our own and Canada's west coast. The Suez canal will lose much of the Japanese and China traffic. Undoubtedly, the result will be a great stimulation in industry and immigration for South America, and this question of immigration promises to become a serious one in some quarters.

It is significant that on the west coast of Canada and in South Africa there is already serious trouble due to indentured labor from India. It is evident that the Asiatic is to become shortly an emigrant. China contains a fifth of the population of the globe, India another fifth. Both countries are crowded. The movement of the European Caucasians toward the west is beginning to lessen. Behind them is the pressure of the yellow people.

Will the opening of the Panama canal with its increase of facilities for easy entrance to the vast undeveloped tracts of South America result in a tide of immigration from Asia? If so, what will be the result of the racial clashes which will inevitably ensue? It must be remembered that Japan, which is a world power, is prepared to compete actively for a commanding place among the traders in the new world which is opening up and it is natural to believe that she will take sides in any attempt to bar the yellow man as well as the brown from participation.

Where does the Carson City News get that stuff about the "new Republicans" coming back to the fold. There is no such thing as "new Republican." The Republicans are all old time believers in the precepts of the party, and they are dyed in the wool and not likely to be seduced from their allegiance. California shows what is going to happen in other states where the defective Republicans wandered away from the fold to taste the flesh pots of novelty. They are coming back, as the registration shows. Returns from the registration agents in the various counties of California show Republicans stand 1000 ahead of the combined strength of Bull Moose and Democrats. Some saw what asses they made of themselves and came back, but some asses still think they can swell up and be known as Bull Moose.

A newspaper recently started near an irrigation project in Arizona is called the Dam Truth. If it lives up to its name it does not take much of a prophet to predict some very hot times in Arizona.

Fanston has been placed in command of the army in Texas, and the country may find relief at the thought that the waiting and watching policy of the president has undergone a change of heart.

Isn't it a frank confession for Elko county to say it would like to have a cattleman for governor? Is the wish due to the action of the tax commission?

The issue on the Comstock is exactly what it was a year ago, and all the time "shall deep mining go on." There is no other question at stake.

The Pullman company says it is going to pay pensions. Better begin by paying wages instead of leaving that formality to the dear public.

WELL KNOWN EUREKANS MARRIED LAST MONDAY

Mr. Frank Kopp and Mrs. Eureka Rattazzi were married in Eureka Monday evening by Judge Peter Breen at his home on Nob Hill, says the Eureka Sentinel. Mr. Frank McBride and Mrs. James Rogantini stood up with them, and were the only ones present other than immediate relatives.

Following the marriage ceremony the wedding party returned to the home of the bride on North Main street, where they were greeted by numerous friends who had assembled to offer their congratulations and best wishes. The Lobster Club band serenaded them, were invited in, and with their joyful music added cheer and pleasure to the event.

The bride is well known in Eureka, being successfully engaged in the grocery business here for a number of years. By her courtesy and kindness to her patrons she is held in high esteem and confidence by them, and has a large circle of personal friends.

The groom is also well known in Eureka, having made his home here since his childhood. He has been engaged in different lines of business, but at present and for several years past, has engaged in mining, being in charge of the Cyanide and other mining properties on Adams Hill for his brother-in-law, C. F. Wittenberg, of Tonopah. His becoming a benedict will be a surprise to his old friends and past associates, who will wish him much happiness in his married life.
